Teaching young children to play baseball requires a lot of patience. When youngsters start to play the game, the goal is not to turn them into great ball players. All you should want to do is teach them a few skills of the game and help them to have fun.

Alligator Drill

Young players should try to catch every ball with two hands. That includes ground balls. Teach youngsters to get in front of every ground ball and place their glove on the ground with the palm facing up. When the ground ball goes into the glove, they should squeeze the ball and put their other hand on top of it to keep it in the glove. The bare hand is like an alligator's jaw coming down when it bites. Tell the youngsters not to forget to "chomp" when they catch a ground ball.

Batting Tee

Everybody wants to hit the baseball. When teaching 5- and 6-year-olds how to hit, you want them to develop a level swing and keep their eye on the ball. The batting tee will help them do this. Set the ball on the tee at belt level. Have the batter stand just behind the ball so he can step into the ball with a level swing. Since the ball is stationary, the player will hit the ball as long as he focuses on the rear and center portion of the ball. Have each player take five swings.

4. Alligator Drill means to teach kids to ____.
(A) catch the ball. (B) run away (C) buy a cell phone (D) play a game
5. When 5-year-old kids hit a ball, they should ____.
(A) go to the coach (B) keep their eye on the ball (C) take a walk (D) hold hands
