Dear Ann Landers,

I am a junior high school student. I like basketball a lot. I am on the school team and practice very hard after school every day. On weekends, I watch basketball games on TV or go to some games with my friends. My parents want me to study hard, but I don't always have time to study or do my homework. They are not very happy about that. What can I do? Give up basketball? Please help me.
Kenyon Stone

Kenyon Stone,

A good education is more important for students than winning basketball games. Do you know Jeremy Lin? His success comes from his hard work first at school and then on the basketball court. Here is a story from the movie, Coach Carter. He locks down the gym and makes the players study with their teachers in the library. So, do your homework, and then you can play basketball. That is the key!
