Now , there are twelve months in a year. But more than 2000 years ago, there were only ten months.

A very smart Roman King, Julius Caesar, changes the calendar to twelve months.

The King Caesar thinks, "Why not have a calendar that goes better with the seasons?"

So, he tells some of the wise people to come together and they brainstorm.

"Let's add two more months!"; he says to them.

And just like that, they make it. They name these months after all sorts of cool things—gods, goddesses, even famous people. So now, thanks to Julius and his team, we have :

January, named after the Roman god Janus. He can look into the past and the future at the same time;

February, named after a Roman festival called Februa;
 March, named after the powerful Roman god Mars;
 April, named after the Latin word “aperire”; meaning to open, like how flowers start to open up in spring;
 May, named after the Greek goddess Maia;
 June, named after the queen of the gods,
 Juno; July, named after Julius Caesar himself;
 August, named after another famous Caesar, Augustus;
 and then September, October, November, and December, coming from Latin words for seven, eight, nine, and ten.
 And that’s the story of how we end up with twelve awesome months in a year, each with its own special story to tell!
